TURNER VALLEY

UNIQUE AMONG OIL FIELDS OF THE WORLD

The Turner Valley, situated 45 miles southwest of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, is one of the most unique oil fields in the world.

It contains the largest producer of crude naphtha in existence—Royalite No. 4 well, which in the past twelve months has produced over 184,000 barrels of oil, testing 73 degrees Beaume, equivalent to overproof gasoline, besides 18,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

With six other wells in the Valley, near the level of the famous gasser, all of which give every indication of being capable of duplicating its marvellous performance, the eyes of the world are on the field.

The depths of these six wells, all of which are either in the limestone or very close to it, at the time of publication, are as follows:

Dalhousie No. 1, 3,546 ft.	Illinois-Alberta, 3,662 ft.	Royalite No. 5, 3,250 ft.
Dalhousie No. 3, 3,345 ft.	McLeod No. 2, 3,678 ft.	Vulcan No. 1, 4,880 ft.

The gas from this big well, which is piped to Calgary, is more than sufficient to supply the city's needs and several million feet are burned daily as it comes from the pipe. The crude naphtha is pumped through a four-inch pipe line to the Imperial Oil Refinery at Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

The yearly production of this one well exceeds by over 20,000 barrels the whole output of the Ontario field. The crude oil from the latter is only one third as strong as the product of the Royalite No. 4. Motor Cars can be run with the crude naphtha as it comes from several wells in the Valley.

It is generally conceded that this high grade oil, which is being produced by the Royalite well, is the seepage from a huge body of crude oil existing somewhere in the district.

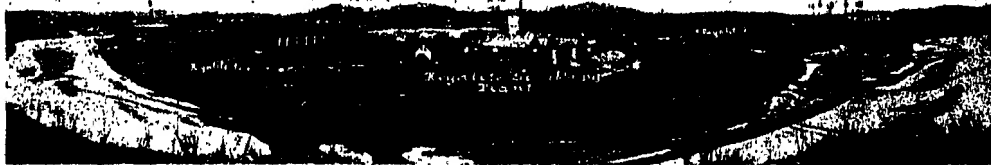

With the bringing in of another well like the Royalite No. 4, millions of outside capital are bound to be invested in Alberta for oil development.

The Turner Valley is one of a series of structures running in echelon formation east of the Rocky Mountains. What some of the other structures will produce will be found out by means of test wells now being sunk.

The Turner Valley has made Calgary the mecca of oil men. The city is daily being visited by representatives of big eastern capital, and negotiations are under way for the sale of large acreages.

Alberta, with 20,000 square miles, where it is known that some of the geological conditions necessary for the accumulation of oil exists, is on the eve of an era of development in the industry that will surpass the rapid growth of the western agriculture in the first decade of this century.

It only requires a second Royalite No. 4 to start this oil boom.
